Brown, the Anvil King

A Resident of Norway in 1898
By Frederick Marshall Davis

"You must hurry back to dinner" were the words that came from the hostess one day a short time ago.

The words were spoken in a loud tone of voice as she referred to the mid-day lunch at the home in Lewiston of Frank E. Brown, who was once a resident and conducted a shop while pounding iron in Norway, Maine.

The shop just referred to was known as the John Cummings blacksmith shop just across the bridge on Whitman Street, near where is known as Printing House Square and was the site where I first conceived the thought and ideas to write the poem, entitled "The Old-Time Blacksmith," that can be found between the two covers of my book on the shelves at the Norway Public Library.

The door closed gently and with Brown by my side, we had no sooner crossed the Brown estate and the Maine Central Railroad track when an express train went speeding by and we stopped for a moment to catch a glimpse of strange faces in the train that quickly vanished from our view.

I believe that the name of Brown is considered to be a common name but men like Brown are not common, he is a giant in stature and although bent a bit with the weight of years, he still retains a large percent of the old-time power and endurance and I watched him as he swaggered along the path ahead of me.

"This is the Hobbes' Retreat and that is where they get their water"—Brown said as he pointed to a bubbling spring beneath our feet and the flow of water proved to me that good water was there in abundance. "A man burned to death right there between those two boulders," he muttered and we stood together for a short space of time to view the grim spot that was easily seen when traveling along the winding path.

Planning New Norway National Bank

A meeting of parties interested in forming a new Norway National Bank was held Tuesday evening at Concert hall. A committee was appointed to see what could be done about forming such a bank and raising the money necessary.

At present, there is but one bank at Norway, the Norway Savings Bank. In 1931, the Norway National Bank merged with the Casco Mercantile Bank of Portland which recently closed its doors and consequently has not opened since the banking holiday, except under restrictions.

Who Was to Blame?

In the hills of Maine there once lived a shepherd named Miller. He was very busy. He had no flock of his own, but he earned his living by working for other shepherds.

After he had been away from home a week, he came back followed by a dog. The people saw that it was a dog, but when they asked him where he had gotten it, he would only say that it was a dog.

Miller spent much of his time training the dog, and his neighbors wanted to know if Miller would not sell it. After Miller drove a small flock into the hills one day after day, and he would not let them steal his sheep, but he said that they ought to have a dog to watch their sheep.

The neighbors were so sure that Miller was set on watch to see what Miller did.

The shepherd followed Miller and when he saw a wolf, Miller pointed out the dog to him. When night came, the dog would creep up to the sheep and separate the one and bring it to his master.

The young shepherd told the others and they took Miller into prison, but the young shepherd told the dog and brought him to the house, and said that an intelligent dog should be.

The Legend of the Arbutus

In the north country there once lived an old man all alone in his wigwam. His hair and beard were so long and so white that they covered him like a mantle. He wore a blue skin to keep himself warm, for his wigwam it was winter.

The little brooks were locked fast under the ice, the wind cried in the trees and no bird or blue jay was to be seen.

One day the old man stepped on the frozen ground with his white slippers and the dew fell and the sweet grasses grew again. She came to the old man's wigwam.

When she lifted the tent flap, it was no longer cold inside, but warm and fragrant. She saw the old man, and she saw the white maiden. Then she took from her dress the loveliest pink and white flowers and hid them under the green leaves.

"I will give you Arbutus, my precious flowers, and my sweetest breath."

—Katherine E. Morey, Age 9, Gr. IV.

The following poems were written by pupils from the Pinhook School 7th grade.

Springtime

Spring is the season of the year
When I like best of all.
When the snow melts from the earth,
And comes again in the fall.
When the birds are all back again,
And sing their glad song.
I don't like many months of the year,
But I love the time when the flowers
Come from the ground with their white slippers
And the dew falls and the sweet grasses
Grow again. She came to the old man's wigwam.

Bluebird

The sun was shining brightly,
Early in the morning,

And sang his cheery song.
His voice was so sweet
And his song so true,
That it made me feel happy
And glad to be here.

"Paper, please," said a man last Friday, and one was sold over the counter to a little lad. The fellow returned, saying, "Well, I didn't find what I wanted in your paper. I want to locate a room and there was not one ad in the paper for a room to let. It is about the first time I have been beaten, for I am a great believer in newspaper advertising and usually can locate a room through the paper." We told him of a few places where he thought he could locate a room for the night.

If you have rooms to let, make use of the Intelligence Column. People are looking for just such things even if banks are closed and songs of depression float through the land.

It really seems that if we went about our work equipped with a little more of the "buy and sell" and do things in our usual way so far as possible, it would be a step toward better days. There are things people have wanted to do and here is the trend of a recent conversation: "It is no use to go there, they won't have it, their stock is low and I may as well go to the city in the first place. I can find it there all right. So-and-so don't have a stock of new goods; they say, 'no one wants to buy.' But one of the reasons is because the things wanted are not there. People are buying in a limited way perhaps, provided they find the things they desire."

Put your ad in this paper and tell the people where to find the things they are looking for and at an attractive price and you will secure results.

NOTES FROM COUNTY EXTENSION WORK

D. H. Ridley, County Agent; Gilberta P. Waters, County Club Agent; Ada Brewster, Home Demonstration Agent

Plant Potato Seed-Pieces as Soon as Possible After Cutting

Experiments made on Arrostook Farm, near Presque Isle, over a period of years have shown that storage of cut seed for two weeks is a dangerous practice. Seed-piece decay, missing hills, and black-leg have been shown to be definitely associated with such storage of cut seed. When cut seed is stored under ordinary farm conditions, it is practically impossible to maintain the conditions of temperature and humidity that are necessary for the best healing of the cut surfaces, and much seed-piece decay often results.

On the other hand, no trouble has been experienced when cut seed-pieces were planted in suitable potato soil, and soil conditions as they exist in Northern Maine are very favorable for the healing or corking-over process.

Cut seed and seed-pieces should be stored for long periods without seed-piece rot developing. However, farmers who find this necessary must be cautious that no heat and spoiling occur. Heat and spoiling are most common when the seed is cut and stored in large, poorly ventilated piles. Allowing the seed to dry in crates before piling appears to eliminate this trouble.

Ditching With Dynamite

Agricultural engineers in recent years have developed methods of using dynamite for farm purposes to an extent that makes the explosive a sort of "tool" for doing many kinds of work efficiently and economically. In many cases, the use of dynamite offers decided advantages in making drainage ditches and for their maintenance. Some interest in dynamite ditching has been shown in Oxford County, and county agent, Ridley, would welcome inquiries or arrange demonstrations if desired.

Ditches of any length and practically any required width and depth can be blasted. This work can be done with a single blast by what is known as the "propagation method." It is necessary, however, that the soil be of a certain consistency and of at least 50 per cent strength is used. The popular name is "ditching dynamite." Other kinds of dynamite are too insensitive for this use.

The explosive is loaded in holes of the required depth at regular intervals and the proper spacing in a row. The depth of the holes, the distance between them and the amount of dynamite used are determined not only by the dimensions of the ditch desired, but also the character of the soil and its moisture content.

The method is by "propagation," a cartridge in but one of the holes is primed with a blasting cap and fuse, or an electric blasting cap. Where the electrical method is used, it is necessary to use an electric battery to generate the current to rent to fire the cap. The detonation of the initial or primed charge sets in motion an "explosive wave" which is carried by the moisture in the soil from hole to hole. The blast generates a force to charge in such rapid succession as to give the effect of the simultaneous explosion of all the charges. Ditches a half-mile long can no longer be blown in a single blast.

The simplest type of ditch and the one most generally needed is the so-called single row ditch. As the name indicates, the holes are spaced in a single row. It is required. It is five to seven feet wide at the top, two and one-half to three feet deep, and sixteen to eighteen inches wide at the bottom. The spacing between holes can be obtained by using a single cartridge in each hole. The depth of the holes and the spacing will depend upon the nature of the soil and the moisture content. The spacing between holes is of a depth that will allow the top of a single cartridge to come within six to twelve inches of the surface.

The average space between holes in a row is eighteen inches. By using heavier loading, single row ditches thirty feet wide at the top and twelve feet deep have been blasted.

Wide, shallow ditches are blasted by the "cross-section method," while the "post-hole method" is used to blast narrow ditches. Correct directions for blasting are given in the county extension pamphlet, "Ditching with Dynamite," which is available from a number of sources.

Ditches can be cleaned out by following very much the same procedure as for blasting. To settle the ditch, a core is taken, however, to guard against loading too near to the banks, in order to avoid loosening the slopes and causing the "sloughing" of the sides and berm.

Poultry Diseases

Diseases of poultry are running up a charge account against almost every person in the poultry business. The poultry raiser pays a little each month and a little more the next, but the debt never seems to be fully paid. Most of the trouble in poultry flocks in Maine, as indicated by autopsy records of the past year, is caused by the common ailments with which we are more or less familiar.

Occidiosis is probably more prevalent than any other trouble. It is usually caused by the trouble usually become thin, pale, stunted birds seen in the mature flock. These birds should be eliminated as soon as detected.

"Listen, Son"

The following is from an exchange and sent in for publication by a party living in a nearby town. He says "Think it worth printing. I know a father of several boys, not a thousand miles from your home town, which I hope meets his eye. He has one son who is just like the boy in the clipping and the father is like the man."

I am saying this to you as you lie asleep, one little paw crumpled under your cheek and the curls sticky wet on your damp forehead. I have stolen into your room alone. Just a few moments ago, as I sat reading my paper in the library, a hot, stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

These are the things I was thinking, son: I had been cross to you. I scolded you as you were dressing for school because you gave your face merely a wash with a towel. I took you to task for not cleaning your shoes. I called out angrily when I found you had thrown some of your things on the floor. At breakfast I found fault, too. You spilled things. You gulped down your food. You put your elbows on the table. You spread butter on your bread. You ate like a pig.

Then it began all over again in the latter afternoon. As I came up the hill road I spied you down on your knees playing Sudden. The more you were holes in your stockings. I humiliated you before your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house. Stockings were exposed and if you saw them you would be more careful. Imagine that, son, from a father. It was such stupid, silly logic.

You remember later, when I was reading in the library, how you came to softly, timidly, with a sort of hunted look in your eyes? When I glanced up over my paper, impatient at the little head of you as you hid behind the door. "What is it you want?" I snapped. You said nothing, but ran across, in one tempestuous plunge; and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me. Again and again, and your small arms tightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which you neglected could not wither. And then you were gone, patting up the stairs.

Well, son it was shortly afterwards that my slipper slipped from my hands, and a terrible sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart. What has habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining, of finding fault, of upbraiding, all of these were my rewards for being a boy. It was not that I did not love you; it was that I expected so much of you. I was measuring you by the yardstick of my own years.

And there was so much that was good, and fine, and true in your character. You did not deserve my treatment of you, son. The little head of you as you hid behind the door. "What is it you want?" I snapped. You said nothing, but ran across, in one tempestuous plunge; and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me. Again and again, and your small arms tightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which you neglected could not wither. And then you were gone, patting up the stairs.

are still a baby. Yesterday you were in your mother's arms, your head on her shoulder. I have asked too much, too much.

Dear Boy, Dear little son, a penitent father, your instant slave, here in the moonlight. I kiss the little fingers and the damp forehead and the yellow hair. Tears came, and heartache and remorse, and also a greater, deeper love, when you ran through the library door and wanted to kiss me.

I do not know of a better shrine before which a father or mother may kneel, if stand that of a sleeping child. I do not know of a holier place, a temple where one is more likely to come into close touch with all that is infinitely good, where one may come nearer to seeing and feeling God.

I am passing this "confession" along to the fathers who may be privileged to read it, and for the benefit of all the little "fellows" in the growing, earth-blessing little Georgies, and Billy's and Mary's, Elizabeth's and Jane's of this very good world of ours.

Were all fathers to go into close secret communion with themselves most of them, if not all of them, would find themselves able to make some confession the one of this article has made. And were all fathers to make such a confession and live up to it how different things would be. In such a case the immediately pressing problem of hundreds of thousands of our youth out on the highways, many of them getting into serious trouble, would cease to be a problem in the course of a little while.

Anyone who is half-way honest is forced to admit that one of the troubles with the youth of today is that our boys and girls do not have the home associations, intimacies and influences that the youth of other days had and profited from.

Your town officers have been trying to make arrangements with some of the Banks to take on our town loans for this year so that we could pay our usual bills as they become due until the 1933 taxes are available, so far since the Bank Holiday was declared, we have been able to borrow $5,000.00. This is practically exhausted and at the present time we are owing approximately $10,000.00 with no prospect of receiving further aid from the Banks.

Eastern District

Bethel—Harry E. Jordan, Bethel, to Mrs. H. H. Holbrook, Lynn, Mass. A parcel in Bethel Village east of Chapman Street but not adjoining to it. Bounded by land of Mrs. Helen Berry; the Roberto P. Brown property; land of Augustus C. Little and the Sperry and a lane between the real estate of Jennie Little and the former Alberto F. Copeland property. A certain right of way is reserved.

Mexico—Theodore Boutte to Emelia Boutte of Mexico. Lot No. 22 in the Sanders Purchase with buildings, fronting on Worthley Avenue. Same was conveyed to Boutte by William Oliver in 1920. Deed is given to correct a title.

Norway—Lavina W. Fogg to Norman H. Knightly of Norway. Land and buildings on the south westerly side of the Elmford Road, bounded on two sides by the "Chief lot" and road. Same premises were conveyed by Samuel L. Fogg to Knightly, April 21, 1930. Grantor may use of the premises until May 30, 1933. Grantee will pay taxes for 1933. Consideration not exceeding $950.00.

Paris—Osman K. Clifford to Merton K. Clifford of South Paris. Garage standing on land now owned by grantor, being a small town for instance, our Service Garage man practices the art, "regular Yankee swapping" work for wood, cords of it from several needing work done and "no money, but wood," and vice versa. When garage man needed footwear and "no money" exchanged labor with shoe man for shoes. That's just a sample of brotherly exchange which is no doubt duplicated in many places during the depression period, but are reticent about having it made public as there is no old hand loom to garish it.

LOST 40 POUNDS ON DOCTOR'S ADVICE

"I'm a user of Kruschen Salts as a reducing remedy and can say they are fine. Have lost more than 40 pounds in the past year. Am gradually reducing as my doctor advises." Miss Bernice Waldo, Haman, N. Dakota. (Oct. 31, 1927).

Once a day take Kruschen Salts—one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning. Besides losing weight, you'll gain in health and physical attractiveness—constipation, gas and acidity will cease to bother you—you'll feel younger—more active—full of ambition—clear skin—sparkling eyes.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at L. V. Ashton's or any drugstore in the world, but demand and get Kruschen and if one bottle doesn't joyfully please you—money back.

BAKED RIGHT

—right here in Maine!

"BAKED RIGHT" means baked just the way Maine folks like their crackers. Flaky, tender, yet wholesome and satisfying. And slightly salted to please the appetite. That's why N.B.C. SODAS are so popular. Always oven-fresh, too, for they're made right here in Maine. The big 1-pound or 2-pound package is the thrifty size to buy. Remember the name—N.B.C. SODAS.

Sensible, Easy Reading

By Dr. F. E. Mitchell

Surely the bankers are not more "sensible" than the farmers.

It was best, probably, to have a show-down. If bankers could be so "sensible" they had been permitted to perform the duties of the farmer and would have been yet worse off now.

If government could be conducted honestly, it should control all banking, all transportation and every public utility. If men were assured of employment suitable to their abilities and an income ample to meet their needs, they should be satisfied. Men like Mitchell of the City National Bank of New York are a disgrace to humanity. "Helen Maria" Dawes is another of the same ilk. When men like these are permitted to juggle with mere masses of paper, to the detriment of humanity, there is something that should be corrected.

Employment on the County Commissioners' Board last week. If employment is to be a great number of men, there will be, in my opinion, a new colony at the County Farm. It is more disgraceful to be a tenant than to accept relief in another way. Men must eat and be provided with a place to sleep.

The employment of great numbers of men in the forests is not the way I would like to see the costs of transportation, etc., would be too great for the accomplishment. This is the way to be accomplished.

Utilizing of beer will probably result in employment to a great number. Employment would take over all transportation and operate for the benefit of the community, fairly and honestly, many people could be employed. The transportation, like the price of food, is now out of proportion and must be corrected.

When I was telling me a story, the man was asked for security, gave me the same old story—many times over. He returned in due time and took back his money. "Now," said he, "I want to check my account. So he produced his money, received a receipt, blank checks and was told that he was not to be paid.

"But," he asked, "Where is the money?" You demanded collateral from me, you let me have cash, and now you have cash and I want security for it." Sounds fair, doesn't it? A combination of old school and a smattering of new school tenets is not a good mixture. Conditions and the outlook for the future are not enough to make one afraid. There was a place to run to one day, the virtue of the old darkey's "It ain't no disgrace to run away, it's afraid."

Practical and idealism is what I am talking about. One that will enable me to break even. I'm just an individual, alone; in and superfluous and have always supposed I had a normal supply of common sense. There is something wrong somewhere. A wrong that sink a ship. Wrong ideas are everywhere; so bad that one is one too many.

There is now listed with a Boston agent, Hope to sell it, go West and make a fortune with the country. That could be a very easy fifty years ago.

The milk agree with your stomach? It does, try a strictly milk diet (and three oranges daily) for three weeks. I did it and then returned to my normal diet. Have gained fourteen pounds. Not wet, 125 net. Not too fat for a fellow of my age.

William Poland from Peru is stopping with Charlie Farrar for a while.

Mrs. Emerson Bartlett spent one day last week with her daughter, Mrs. Charlie Russell, of Hartford.

Lionel Bartlett was used up all last week with a severe toothache.

Joseph Bosse hauled four loads of hay from the Alfred Morrell place last week.

Master Junior Millett, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Millett, who is an enthusiastic young lumber jack, takes great pleasure in showing his fellow playmates an ax handle and a buck-saw frame made by Lionel Bartlett, per order of Junior's father.

Roads through here are in bad shape as the frost is coming out, and there has not been an automobile over the Green Woods road since P. V. Redding went to Hartford, Friday morning, the 17th, and did not think it practicable to return home this way and detoured down the Androsoggin River road as far as Turner till Saturday morning, the 15th, when Joseph Bosse called out in his car, accompanied by three of his children.

Spring rather backward here, though April 12th the fields and open hillsides, especially those with a southern slope, were practically all bare, though all the mountains visible from our place namely Moleckett, Black, Long, Moose Young's, and the Pinnacle, have been completely covered with snow to date as well as more than one foot of snow in the woods of all lowland in this section. Now listen, Thursday morning, the 13th, it started to snow and kept at it well into Friday morning when the writer measured the depth of snow to find it was twelve inches, going some.

Recent callers at Emerson Bartlett's were Charlie Russell, Lou Farrar, Doton and Tink Farrar, George Spaulding and Walter Newell.

Emerson Bartlett has sold a story to an editor of a magazine in Los Angeles, California. Emerson read the continued article of "Our Trip West" that appeared in the three recent issues of the Advertiser by Mrs. Agnes Fuller Benson of Wakeville, very much, it was both interesting and educational indeed, and he thinks it was the longest trip he ever heard of a cat and kitten traveling. Our folks at home are strong on cats, having at this time five very rare specimens four of which are as white as snow.

Easter Sunday, and the fields are as bare again as they were before the heavy snow fall of last week. And now we are wondering if Sam Morrell will tell us that we are going to have another snow storm this spring.

There must be some chickens in the neighborhood of Summer when we are told that it takes one full bag and one-half of the second to feed Herbert Bisbee's young chicks one day, and at that because there was one skunk that Lionel Bartlett did not catch last fall, or some other skunk got into one of Herbert's chicken coops and killed forty chicks. And at George Spaulding's at this time they have seven incubators running. Also at the Adams Poultry Farm, just a short distance from Summer, there is better than two thousand chicks.

Lionel Bartlett started out on a trip Easter Sunday morning, first going to Charlie Sturdivant's where he was to stop over night, next morning he was to go to George Howe's place in Norway on sort of a business trip.

Charlie Russell was a dinner guest at Emerson Bartlett's, Easter Sunday.

Earle Staples, our R. P. D. carrier, is hard hit in the condition of the roads at this time, and has been getting to this section of his route for the past few days by horse power, at from three to four o'clock p. m. while just previous to the bad roads he often reached this point at eleven a. m.

Emerson Bartlett traded George Spaulding a few cords of wood cut four feet, though at the stump in the woods, in exchange for grain and groceries.

Jerry Bartlett stopped a few days over Easter with Ophelia Varney of Redding.

Uncle Zeke and Hulda Visit the Stores

Rain, more rain, and mud hub deep didn't keep up from the weekly visit to Norway Village Tuesday afternoon. Hulda has the habit of gadding on a certain day, regardless of weather, hard traveling, rush of boiling sap or fitting the season's wood. I just bucked up this time and told Hulda a few things. She glared for a minute, then the sparks commenced to fly. "If you could stand it to scoop all last night in the rain for a dozen consecutive nights, you can have through a three hour trip to the village" was her broadside. Friends, I felt humble and said "Yes, dear, you win."

Hulda had been hobnobbing around all spring with sore feet, so the E. N. Swett Shoe Co., where Foot Health Week is observed, she submitted to a print and analysis. This service, by a specialist, is free. Tennis shoes are the things now the ground is drying after the awful soaking, good ones are marked 85c. Ladies shoes with perforations, unlined and right for hot weather, are from $1.95 up. Men are accommodated in a price range $2.00 to $4.00.

We called at the Merchant Store, Zeke was cheerful, in spite of pouring rain and bank holidays. His clerks were getting departments into line for the big month-end sale to be launched April 29. "This will be the largest selling event at our store since Dollar Day," I overheard Zeke tell Hulda confidentially. Well, I've let the cat out, but read next week's Advertiser. That will break up my bit of gossip.

Tried to keep the inquisitive Hulda out of Stone's while I spoke around the fishing tackle, small nets, bait boxes, tackle boxes, flash lights and things that appeal to men with spring fever. Wife owns on fishing-waste a time, etc. Oh, yes. That point is going fast for it is a good buy.

McAllister's Store will be a year old Saturday, the 23rd, and to celebrate the event, Don will sell a whole quart of ice cream for 40c, six flavors. Besides a 10 per cent discount will be placed on everything in the store Saturday and Sunday. He is booking orders for Mothers' Day Chocolates, the Paige & Shaw Schrafft's and Samoset kinds. We looked over a fine line of cards, like greetings, graduation, Mothers' Day, convalescent and other occasions.

Ashton is still in the market with late spring wall paper. Hulda just couldn't keep away from the display of stock, priced from a very low figure to something higher according to quality. The offer to mail free a book of samples holds good. Mail a request to Ashton's Drug Store, that's all, Lester or Percy will do the rest.

At the L. F. Pike Co. a line of Hart Schaffner & Marx suits attract attention this week. The line has been sold at this store for many years and the honest value in the goods is unchallenged. Mr. Pike told us the leaders are brown and gray worsteds, coats are two button, notched lapel. Suits have one or two pairs of trousers, according to choice. The line is carried in stock and about any normal form can be fitted on the spot.

A table just loaded with ladies' footwear is a special trademark at the Jas. Smith Shoe Store. Nearly every pair is marked down from a higher level and arranged in four groups, $1.45, $1.95, $2.45 and $2.95. Dress and sport models can be found. On the shelves are the white, brown and blue T-strap and the sandals with rubber crepe soles, wedge and Cuban heels, two prices, $1.00 and $1.50.

"Paint up" is the slogan at the Norway Furniture Co., where a nice wooden rose trellis is given away with a can of garden paint, white or green. Both can and trellis are given for the price of the paint, namely 80c. Next Monday a drive starts to introduce B. F. S. paints. Coupons mailed are good for a free can of that product until May 6. Now is the time to fix up before summer guests arrive.

Meeting of Bank Depositors

Met at Odd Fellows' Hall, Committee Name—Paris Trust Company, Solvent at Time of Merger

Depositors of the local branch of the Casco Mercantile Trust Company, to the number of 267 participated, either by being present or by letter, in a meeting held at Odd Fellows' hall Saturday afternoon. Speakers contended that the deposits were originally made with the Paris Trust Company, and that many of the pass books were still under that name and that depositors holding such books of the old institution had a right to claim priority in the segregated assets of the branch bank. The Paris Trust Company merged with the Portland institution July 25, 1931. Several check books in use at the time of the bank holiday bear the name of the Paris Trust Co.

The discussion of the situation by Alton C. Wheeler, prominent Auburn attorney, representing 25 or more depositors, brought out the following salient points:

That, in the savings department of the Paris Trust Company, certain assets were segregated to act as a guarantee under the law, and because of the merger the assets had been mingled with the assets of the Casco Mercantile bank, naturally diluting them. It was claimed that the Paris Trust Co., on the date of the merger was not only solvent but was a strong institution. When the merger took place it naturally effected the Paris depositors.

One point brought out was that the savings account books constituted a contract with the Paris Trust Company, and no depositor is obliged to accept the Casco Mercantile bank as a guarantor unless he wants to do so. No one can successfully question the rights of two banks to merge, but courts in other states have held that when one bank has purchased assets of another bank, those assets thus purchased, must be held in trust, to protect the depositors in the original account.

A committee to protect the interests of the depositors and safeguard their deposits was appointed. Byron W. Tuttle, proprietor of Hotel Andrews is chairman of the committee and Robert T. Smith is secretary. Mr. Smith is the son of former Bank Commissioner Smith of Maine, and practicing lawyer in this town. Others on the committee are Hon. Fred L. Edwards of Bethel, former member of legislature and formerly a director of the Bethel National bank. He is a successful lumberman. Mrs. Lottie M. Burk of Bethel, recently appointed postmistress under the Roosevelt administration, Merton A. Millett, South Paris business man and Alton C. Wheeler, Auburn attorney, complete the committee.

One of the aims of the committee is to take appropriate action to bring about some decision by the court which will return the original assets to the Paris Trust Company depositors. In that way it is believed that the savings depositors would receive a larger per cent in liquidation than in any other manner. Consequently the Paris Trust Company depositors are filing proof of priority claims and if they receive preferred dividends in that manner, then they would become general creditors on an equal basis with other Casco depositors. Attention was called to the fact that this situation applies to savings deposits and has nothing to do with the check department.

Following the session an informal meeting of the committee was held and it was agreed to procure further information and to meet at South Paris Tuesday afternoon, April 18th.

It is understood that within a short time local people interested in the Paris Trust will endeavor to get the attitude of the public toward an organization to take the place of the Casco Mercantile and possibly to supersede the Buckfield bank, formerly a branch of the Paris Trust Co.

During the Saturday meeting the question was raised regarding the special value of National banks, with some of them closed, and those raising it were informed that the new regime in Washington is substantially representative of large farming areas.

"There are men" said Mr. Wheeler, "who believe that farming is the backbone and stability of our Nation. Farm real estate is considered by the present administration as an gilt edge security. Many banks in Maine have been unable to open because they couldn't show Washington authorities farm mortgages or their equivalent, since they had their funds invested in securities which Washington wouldn't recognize as having good sound money value today."

There were large delegations present from Buckfield, South Paris, West Paris, Norway, Locke's Mills, Bethel, Bryant Pond and Woodstock.

DEPOSITORS' MEETING SOON

Members of a committee appointed at a recent meeting of the depositors of the local branch of the Casco Mercantile Trust Co., formerly the Paris Trust Co., met in conference Tuesday afternoon. There was a general discussion of the situation, but little accomplished as several of the members were unable to be present due to the unpassable condition of the road at Snow Falls Inn, which was under two feet of water. Those present from Rumford were obliged to return by the way of Lewiston.

A depositors meeting will be called for Friday or Saturday if certain figures can be obtained from the bank, before that time.

GREENWOOD—ROWE HILL

Meeting of Smoky Mountain Boys—Christian Endeavor Activities.

Raynor Farrum has left Mrs. York's and gone to Volney Lakeway's to board, at Bryant Pond.

We have been having a good old fashioned rain storm, the roads are in very bad condition, the frost is coming out, and water washing the roads badly in some places. This continues much longer, some parts of the roads will be impassable. The brooks are also very high. Not moving from Indian Pond yet.

Ray Hanson returned from North Norway, Monday.

Newton Bryant has been confined to the house with a bad cold the past week.

Durward Lang and Murray Ring are parking their cars on town line hill and walking the rest of the way.

The Smoky Mountain Boys held their regular meeting last Wednesday evening at "Arkie" Brooks' as usual. A few of the early arrivals were waiting for the rest of the boys to arrive, someone happened to give the Smoky Mountain an animal coming across the field in front of the house. It came within twenty feet of the barnyard fence and stopped. The seven boys present rushed to the door and a better view of the animal was discovered that it was a large sized bob cat. The kitty did not stop to say hello, but ran for the woods, the boys in hot pursuit, but as no one had a gun, he escaped. It seems as if he returned a few nights later and caught the Brooks boys' pet bunny, and he disappeared and has not been found. This is the ninth program, all members were present but one. There was one visitor, Roger Hanson, of Howe Hill.

A framed picture of the Christ, painted by Glenn Martin of Greenwood Center and given the Society by him is a much appreciated gift by the day school as well as the Grange.

EAST SWEDEN

George Porter of Bridgton Highlands started in to run the D. T. Adams saw orchard, but the weather got the best of him and he had to give it up. Not a very good year to make maple syrup in this section.

Planing and saving shingles is the order of the mill these days. Henry Ridlon and Lee Kimball were at the Knobel mill, April 17th. Gerald Bishop is working for Ray Kneeland at the mill. The mail carrier has had to come with a horse the past three weeks. Almost impossible to get an auto over the roads here now.

Town Affairs

Would Scale Down Appropriations

The townspeople met in informal session last night to discuss the financial situation and find ways and means to meet the appropriations voted at the annual meeting in March. As a matter of fact, the town is without funds and the financial situation is almost impossible.

The items were reviewed and discussed, and suggestions offered. Some offered that the towns must be made without a budget, far from a constructive policy.

The matter was left with the committee of citizens to prepare a report to the selectmen, school committee, and other commissioners, then have a special meeting called.

An informal meeting of the committee of citizens to prepare a report to the selectmen, school committee, and other commissioners, then have a special meeting called.

One hundred voters and their families were present. Assistant Town Clerk, Arthur Buck, reported that the town is without funds and the financial situation is almost impossible.

Police service, interest charges and other matters were discussed informally. Program was as follows: The program was then turned over to the selectmen, which was in charge of the selectmen, and Ernest Moore, school committee member, Arthur Tucker, and other members of the selectmen.

Next meeting will be on all day, April 22, with State Lecturer Mr. Howard Keniston.
